Let this be a Day of Sentiment.

LET this be a day when sentiment instead of business is uppermost in your mind, for Decoration Day has been set apart as a holiday that we may commune with nature on her great mystery and pay homage to those brave and dear ones who have passed to the Great Beyond. Let this be their day.

It is the day of soldiers who lie sleeping in the National Cemetery and sailors whose graves may be in the depths of the mighty ocean. The call of country was answered in their youth and ere their young lives were fairly launched in defense of the nation many fell. Some followed the flag and led long and honored soldiers' lives until death overtook them. All had the same spirit and fervor and to the last were willing to die in defense of national honor. Were it not for the compensation of national gratitude and affection the heart of the patriot would not feel the same thrill at the thought of serving his country. But it is such a glorious service and an honored death when 70,000,000 people regard their soldiers and their sailors as do we, and this feeling does not alone surge through our hearts when as recently we beheld the marching thousands on parade or when we know they are doing actual battle on some foreign shore. Our hearts go out to them beyond the grave and the beautiful custom of this holiday with its wreath-making and religious service attest the tender appreciation, the constancy and the love of the American people.

Roosevelt's Future Service.

It should be a compliment to President Roosevelt to know that the people are beginning to worry over his future and want to provide some sphere in the after presidential life befitting his peculiar genius and capacity. It is not enough that he has been an active executive. They do not prescribe retirement and ease after his arduous labors but would carve for him a still active and useful career in the nation's history. Speculation is keen as to what trend his life will take—that life by nature so strenuous and by recent experience so enriched with knowledge of the nation and her problems. He will not put these problems from him, but there is a question whether or not he will continue to take an active interest in their immediate solution. He has had to cope with them in all their phases while in the Presidential chair, but Mr. Roosevelt is a thinker and a writer and perhaps he will turn out much valuable literature on the subject rather than to carry on an active campaign against conditions which he may realize can be bucked by so stalwart a President as himself but not downed or permanently squelched by his immediate successors. When he shall have educated the people in the need for better laws and more rigid enactment against colossal malefactors and has succeeded in erasing the phrase "that's business" and substituting "that's fraud" and so changing modern business methods he will then have started a new era in American affairs. He has whacked the law-breaker from the presidential chair until the nation has been aroused. So much he has done, but he can now keep the goals alive by his excellent pen and the written word will if persisted in (and Roosevelt is not a quitter) bring about the evolution he would precipitate. Four or eight years as President could not accomplish reform. He gave his reforms great momentum from his advantageous position, but he can and will do more effective work when he can devote his whole time to literary work. What his material is can readily be seen from his messages to the Congress, each part of which would make political pamphlets that would tax the shelves of our greatest libraries.

There is one great service that Mr. Roosevelt could perform. He has the gift of writing, which is fortunate, but unlike so many writers who are theorists, he has the advantage of having had the practical knowledge of the inner workings of the country, its law-makers and its law-breakers. It has been aptly said that "there is a restlessness in activity and that we must find occupation for kings." It is seldom, however, that people will carve out a destiny beyond the highest place in the land, yet such are they doing for Roosevelt and would find for our President an occupation which would still give them the benefit of his intelligent energy.

THE unanimous endorsement by the recent Republican County Convention of Hon. Duncan E. McKinlay for another term in the Congress was a spontaneous recognition of the services of an able and influential man as the representative of the Second District at our national capital. Mr. McKinlay, since first taking his seat in the House of Representatives four years ago, has served his constituency not only faithfully but influentially as well. During the sessions of Congress his talents as a thinker and orator has won for him the recognition of the President and the old and influential members of both Houses, and this has enabled him to do much for the people of his district. Broad-minded and liberal in his views and a man who knows no such word as fail when it comes to securing appropriations for his district, has won for him the respect, admiration and loyalty of a constituency not confined simply to party but to the people as a whole who value him for his true worth.

Wise Talks by the Office Boy.

"Oh, yes! I was invited to the party," said brother Bill. "I got there kind of late, and after I'd put my coat and hat on somebody's bed & hung my cane on the headboard, I straightened my hair with my hands (they'd hid the hair tools) and went down stairs feeling like a cent ante. After going through the introduction stunt as gracefully as a revolving chair, I found a seat between a couple of winners that talked across my white vest about their next summer's shirt waists, and wondered if short sleeves would still be the style. I butted in after a while, and we got along fine until somebody gave me a napkin. It might as well have been a lemon for my trouble began right then. 'Twas only a minute when somebody else handed me a dish with a little hash on a lettuce leaf, and a roll I couldn't bite with my front teeth. I passed it up and had started on the hash, when somebody came along and handed me a china tumbler with coffee in it on a saucer, and a spoon that came off a scarf pin. While I was juggling the hash and trying to put some sugar and cream in the tumbler, I heard a yell. I looked around and found my hash, fork and roll had tumbled into the lap of one of the winners. The other one hit my elbow and the coffee went up her sleeve. I made a run for upstairs, got into the wrong room and then lit out." You trade here, don't you?"

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one cure for disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally acting directly upon the blood and mucous surface of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. Last Saturday was the warmest day of the season, the thermometer registering over 100 degrees in the shade.

The good old summer time is now here and our resorts are rapidly filling up with guests. The exodus from the metropolis to this valley this season promises to be a big one.

Wm. Sobbe, Leo Justi, Chas. J. Poppe, P. Monahan, Ed. Thierkoff, James Pieratt, Jerry Allen and Frank Lemoine were among those from Glen Ellen who were here Saturday attending the funeral of the late J. Chauvet.

H. S. Johnson of the Northwestern Telegraph and Telephone company has been here all week superintending the removal of the central office from Simmons' drug store to the company's new quarters in the Castax building, which, Mr. Johnson says, they expect to occupy Monday.

The Board of City Trustees meet in regular monthly session next Wednesday evening. No action will be taken on the license ordinance which was killed by the votes of the people at the late municipal election. The defunct ordinance has been embalmed and will be buried out of sight by a majority of the Trustees, without pomp and without ceremony, when the proper time arrives. It will go its final way unwept, unbronzed, and unsung.

LEMOINE WINERY AGAIN BURNED DOWN

Fiendish Incendiary Applies Torch to the Big Cellar For Third Time.

Frank Lemoine's fine stone wine cellar near Glen Ellen was again completely destroyed by fire between three and four o'clock last Saturday afternoon.

The fire was observed by a number of distant neighbors about 3:30 o'clock, but as everybody on the Lemoine place and near-by ranches were attending the funeral of the late J. Chauvet little could be done to save the valuable property and in an incredible short space of time the fine structure had been completely destroyed except the four bare stone walls.

This is the third time within the past few years that this winery has been destroyed by fire. That Mr. Lemoine is the victim of a revengeful incendiary does not admit of a doubt.

Last year during the temporary absence of Mr. Lemoine and family from home the winery was set on fire and destroyed for the second time. Mr. Lemoine immediately rebuilt a substantial stone and concrete cellar and installed new and modern wine-making machinery and was very proud of his investment.

Owing to the previous fires it was a hard matter to obtain any insurance on the property at all, as the risk was considered extremely hazardous by the insurance people. However, Mr. Lemoine finally succeeded in getting one of the companies to write up a small policy on the property which covers but a small portion of its loss.

The cellar, aside from its valuable machinery and cooperage, contained over 40,000 gallons of last year's vintage, which will not be a total loss as much of it may go to the distillery and be converted into brandy.

Excitement is at fever heat in and around Glen Ellen over the burning of this winery for the third time by an incendiary's torch and should the culprit be apprehended the citizens up that way may take the law into their own hands.

Water Company to Enforce New Rules.

The local water company, in order to regulate the use of its water for garden sprinkling purposes, publishes elsewhere in these columns a new set of rules governing the same. These rules, which are more than fair to the water company's patrons, should be obeyed, even though no penalty be attached, for the safety of the town in case of fire. Now that the hot summer days have set in the indiscriminate use of water for garden sprinkling purposes will impair the water pressure which would be a serious matter in the event of a fire breaking out. This fact alone should influence every good citizen to stand by the water company and endeavor to see that these rules be enforced. As a business proposition, we might also observe right here that the company has rights which its patrons are bound to respect. In any event it were better for the safety of town in general, the water consumer and the source of supply that these rules be observed.

Rubbish Heap Fading Away

The rubbish on the site of the old pavilion in the Plaza is being carted away and soon every vestige of the old concern will have disappeared. We will then expect the Woman's Club to take up the matter of beautifying the grounds surrounding our new hall of justice and—do things.

DEATH OF A NOTABLE WOMAN WEDNESDAY

Mrs. M. H. Mathews, Connected with Many of the Old Families, Passes Away in Santa Rosa.

Mrs. Mary H. Mathews, a pioneer mother of this State and related to many of the old families of Northern California, passed away at her home in Santa Rosa last Wednesday after a brief illness.

Mrs. Mathews, who was a sister of Judge Emmet Seawell of this county and the late Senator Seawell of Mendocino county, came to California in 1853. After residing in Napa several years she came to this county after the death of her first husband, Jos. M. Dudley, and taught school. This was 42 years ago. In 1873 she was married to the late John Mathews and since then had resided in Santa Rosa.

Mrs. Mathews was a very intellectual woman and impressed her personality upon all who knew her. She numbered scores of relatives among the old families of Sonoma and Mendocino. Among these are Judge Seawell of Santa Rosa and James W. and George C. Seawell of Healdsburg; Mrs. B. S. Wood of Oakland and Miss Lou Seawell of Santa Rosa, sisters. Her sons and daughters are Mrs. Luther W. Burris and Miss Mildred Mathews of Santa Rosa, and W. S. Dudley of Healdsburg by her first marriage, and Oscar Mathews of Santa Rosa.

Mrs. Mathews was a native of Tennessee and lived but four months of being 70 years of age when she died. The funeral took place yesterday afternoon in Santa Rosa and was largely attended.

Memorial Day Exercises.

Decoration Day will be appropriately observed in this place today. The graves of the soldiers will be decorated as usual and there will be exercises in Union Hall at 10 a. m., to commemorate the day. The program is as follows:

Introductory remarks, Robert A. Poppe, President of the Day; invocation, Rev. W. C. Day; song, "The Red, White and Blue," grammar school pupils; address, Gen. Theodore Wagner; response on behalf of the citizens of Sonoma, E. T. Dohring; recitation, "Dye Mind, Veterans," Miss Majorie Buchanan; song, "Star Spangled Banner," grammar school pupils; address, Prof. Geo. C. Russell; address, "Lincoln's Gettysburg Address," Richard H. Platt; song, "America," audience.

The Convent School Closing Exercises.

Do not forget that the Convent school closing exercises will take place on Tuesday evening, June 16th, 1908, at 8 p. m., in Union Hall. This year many specialties are promised, but as these exercises are always so charming it is needless as yet to particularize them. Be sure to be there or you will be sorry.

Card of Thanks.

I take this method of expressing my sincere thanks to those kind friends and neighbors who so thoughtfully lent their aid and did all in their power to assist me during the sickness, death and burial of my father, the late Joshua Chauvet. Their good offices will never be forgotten.

HOLLAND MUSTARD.

Some of the Virtues Ascribed to It and One Way to Make It.

Hollanders use enormous quantities of mustard and thrive on the condiment. There is a small spot in Overijssel, I think it is near Goor, where the land slopes gently down to the river IJssel and is a brown gray clay. This is fashioned into the cutest little jugs you ever saw, holding about a pint each, and the genuine Dutch mustard, made only in that pocket borough, according to a secret process handed down for many generations, is hermetically sealed therein. It will keep for years and is as delicious as the finest confection. It is butter, cheese and condiment to the Hollanders who can afford it. And there is no other place on earth where that mustard can be bought.

You might ask, "Why do the Hollanders eat so much mustard?" The answer is: The Holland mustard is a most delightful stomach stimulant. "It makes the food slide down." It cures the worst cases of dyspepsia. It keeps the liver in fine shape. It is an antidote for the most deadly poison—corrosive sublimate. It is in large doses a non-nauseating emetic. It is the only counterirritant handed down to us by our grandmothers—the mustard plaster. The Dutch girls use it sparingly on their velvet cheeks to give a rosy complexion. When a person is down and nearly out a drink made of pure mustard and oil will fetch him around. A mustard "stomp" is a certain cure for catarrh in the nasal cavity. Here is one Dutch method of preparing mustard for the table: Mix equal portions of black and white seeds and grind to a fine powder. Boil this in the best vinegar till thoroughly mixed. Grate some fresh horseradish, squeeze out the juice and add to the mustard. Then put in a little salt, a little sugar, a little turmeric, a little fenugreek and a little white honey. You will eat this on your bread, cake, pie, battercakes and waffles, your meats, fish, game and poultry.—New York Press.

PRESENCE OF MIND.

A Madhouse Doctor's Experience With His Crazy Cooks.

A celebrated Scotch physician tells a story of a madhouse doctor whose presence of mind alone saved his life: "A great friend of mine was for a considerable time the medical superintendent of a lunatic asylum near Glasgow.

"One night in making his customary rounds he had occasion to visit the patients in the kitchen, who were preparing the dinner. There were seven of them, all big, sturdy fellows, who were believed to be harmless. The keeper only looked in upon them now and again, feeling that his constant presence was unnecessary.

"The doctor unlocked the iron barred door of the kitchen and went in among the lunatics.

"There were five large boilers containing scalding water ready for making the day's dinner for the patients.

"One of the lunatics pointed at the boilers full of hot water and, laying his hand upon the doctor's shoulder, said, 'Doctor, I'll make a fine pot of broth.' And the words had no sooner been uttered than the other six madmen shouted in a voice of delight, 'Just the thing,' and, seizing the doctor, were in the very act of putting him into one of the large boilers of scalding water when the doctor had the presence of mind to say, but not a second too soon:

"'Capital broth! But it would taste better if I took my clothes off.'"

"The madmen, with a yell of delight, said 'Yes,' and the doctor asked them to wait a moment while he went and took his clothes off. But as soon as he got out of the kitchen he turned the key in the door and ordered the keeper to see to the lunatics being put under restraint.

"The doctor's presence of mind saved him, it is true, from a terrible death, but he died shortly after raving mad. The experience had destroyed his reason."

Origin of the Postal Card.

In 1889, while Professor Emanuel Herrmann of Vienna was seeking a vast amount of information by correspondence for his notable book, "The Guide to the Study of National Economy," the thought occurred to him that many advantages would result from the adoption of a medium of correspondence cheaper than the sealed letter. On Jan. 26 he went before the Austrian post director with his idea, an open, stamped card, and his suggestion was almost immediately adopted. Within a month the Austrian postal authorities printed and sold 1,000,000 postal cards and thus established this indispensable means of communication.

An Unconscious Toast.

Lord Clyde one day after dinner asked a chaplain to one of the regiments in India for a toast, who, after considering some time, at length exclaimed, with great simplicity:

"Alas and alack a day! What can I give?"

"Nothing better," replied his lordship. "Come, gentlemen; we'll give a bumper to the parson's toast. 'Alas and alack a day!'"

"A lac means 100,000 rupees, or $25,000, which is certainly an income to make one happy.—London Chronicle.

Exercising the Dog.

"Justin," said Mrs. Wyss.

"Yes," replied Mr. Wyss.

"Will you speak a kind word to Pido and make him exercise all day?"

"No music sounds so sweet as your own."

OPTICAL ILLUSIONS.

Striking Examples That May Be Observed in Daily Life.

Doubtless every one has observed while traveling by train that the trees or houses in the distance appear to be speeding along in the same direction as the train, while the nearer objects are fast receding. Many, too, have observed that the top of a level wall built on a steep incline appears to slope upward in a contrary direction to the hill itself at nearly the same angle to the apparent level, and some have curiously regarded the ghostlike gliding and vanishing of dark shadows while passing a double row of fencing, but the following are not so commonly remarked:

One might stand for several minutes watching the revolutions of the cups of an anemometer—for measuring the velocity of the wind—and still be puzzled as to the real way they are turning round. Gaze up at them when there is an uncertain breeze blowing. They revolve rapidly, and you are perhaps perplexed as to their direction. As the wind subsides you would expect to find it easier to tell the direction by the slower revolution; but, as a matter of fact, the difficulty is increased. With the varying speed your first impression is that such and such is the direction. A moment later you reverse that idea, and the longer you gaze the more it seems as if they are spinning round erratically in every possible direction, whereas, of course, they can only turn one way.

Standing immediately beneath a high wall of a building—the longer the wall the better for practical demonstration—many would aver on looking upward that it was not exactly perpendicular, but inclined toward them in a threatening manner. This illusion is the effect of perspective and would be seen to better advantage if you stood between two such walls which faced each other at short distance.—New York Telegram.

THE GONDOLA.

Its Gliding and Guiding Through Venice's Intricate Canals.

The gondola is so perfectly adapted to its purpose that it is like a sentient thing in the gondolier's control. It obeys the slightest impulse of the oar. Through the narrow and intricate lanes of Venice, with the sharp and baffling turns, it glides with unflinching accuracy. The boatmen have about ten different calls by which they announce their approach, as they come to a corner, the turn they will take in a crowd, their way to right and left and all that. And these calls, half song, half cry, echo day and night, and yet so musical are they that they seem to be merely a part of the brooding silence of Venice.

Indeed the wonder of Venice is how all things—the city and the sea, the boats and the people, the songs and the sky—combine to make one perfect whole, caressing and idle as one of Petrarch's sonnets, which one I care not. Here even death is not merely somber. It is friendly and familiar as well. I saw them put old Paolo to bed for the last time. He had been in his prime a stout gondolier of the traghetto of Santa Sofia, near the Rialto, in old age was a ragged "hooker" of the gray. In his quarter, however, he was a respected man. Indeed to be old or to be a child is among the gondoliers a title to tenderness and respect. And so when a good man dies in the poorer quarters the neighbors combine and hire a brass band to celebrate his virtues.—Vance Thompson in Outing Magazine.

Sturgeons' Backbones.

From the dried backbone of sturgeon, which has the appearance of macaroni, an excellent Russian soup, called vestiga, is made. It is excessively nutritive and invigorating, almost as much so, indeed, as the famous beche de mer (not mer), otherwise the trappang, or edible sea slug. It is collected in large quantities throughout the Indian archipelago, especially to the eastward, for the China market. There are many varieties, such as the large scarlet trappang from Macassar, the Kur-trappang from Borneo, the great black trappang from Lenocon and many more. Properly prepared, this is absolutely the most inspiring soup there is and is as superior to turtle as the latter is to water gruel. It costs about $2.50 per pound.

Why?

Is one always chilled to the marrow? Is an explorer always intrepid? Is a swoop always a fell swoop? Is a statesman always eminent? Is a newspaper man always a well known newspaper man? Is a bargain always extra special? Is drapery always clinging? Is sweetness always cloying? Is a ruffian always burly? Is one always within an inch of death? Why not two inches? And why, why, why, is a conclusion always foregone?—Cleveland Press.

Mutually Helpful.

Husband and wife are away, and I'm going over there this evening to cheer him up. Wife—Why don't you bring him here? Husband—Well—I'm not feeling very well and need a little cheering up myself.

Might and Mane.

Tom Hood, the punster, once described the meeting of a man and a lion, and in doing so he said, "The man ran off with all his might and the lion with all his mane."

Manner is nough. A man always looks better when he carries himself well than when a couple of friends are trying to carry him.

Weak Women

To weak and ailing women, there is at least one way to help. But with that way, two treatments must be combined. One is local, one is constitutional, but both are important, both essential. Dr. Shoop's Night Cure is the local.

Dr. Shoop's Night Cure, the Constitutional. The "Night Cure," as its name implies, does its work while you sleep. It soothes sore and inflamed mucous surfaces, heals local weaknesses and discharges, while the Restorative, cases nervous excitement, gives renewed vigor and ambition, builds up wasted tissues, bringing about renewed strength, vigor and energy. Take Dr. Shoop's Restorative—Tablets or Liquid—a general tonic to the system. For positive local help, use as well
